STAFF AND STUDENTS.

The Session 1941–42 opened in more stable conditions than either of the preceding war-time sessions, inasmuch as the arrangements for carrying on the teaching work outside London were, save for one or two slight variations, a continuance of those which obtained in 1940–41. So long as the College buildings remained untouched by enemy action, the possibility of an early resumption of work in them was always very much in the mind of members of the College. The Annual Report of 1941 showed that plans for the return of many of the departments were actually at the point of completion when the first damage by air raid was done in September 1940. This, and the many disasters of the following months, completely changed the outlook. While the desire to bring the Faculties together again and to restore a full collegiate life was as strong as ever it had been, the most ardent advocates of reunion were forced to recognise that a return to London was impracticable and was likely to remain so until peace was attained. Plans for the earliest possible rehabilitation when that time arrives have already been the subject of much careful consideration this session. More is said about these on page 28. In the meantime, the College Committee desire once again to record their appreciation of the continued, and in some cases the extended, hospitality provided by the receiving colleges.

When it was found necessary once again to evacuate those departments which had attempted to return to London, they could not all be accommodated at Aberystwyth or Bangor, and the College had to trespass on the hospitality of University College, Southampton, and Royal Holloway College. In the case of students of the Faculties of Arts and Science who had been received at University College, Southampton, during the Session 1940–41, it has proved practicable this Session to include those parts of the work either at Aberystwyth or Bangor, and the Committee have expressed to University College, Southampton, their warm thanks for hospitality provided at considerable inconvenience and on very generous terms. It has also proved possible to accommodate the students so kindly received last Session by Royal Holloway College. The reduction of the number of centres, six this Session as against eight in 1940–41, is necessarily an advantage.

The following table shows the position this Session: the corresponding figures of 1940–41 are given in brackets :—

SESSION 1941–42.

		449 (527)	413 (413)
	Total number of students	862 (940)

Of the above students, 53 are postgraduate, 656 are preparing for first degrees, 116 for diplomas, 12 for Architecture or Decoration certificates, and 25 are taking other courses in Architecture or Fine Art.

It will be seen that the total number of students has decreased, as was to be expected, since the students who entered in the last peace-time year (1938–39) have now gone ; there is, however, an increase in the number of new entries in 1941–42 as compared with 1940–41, 335 as against 254. In Faculties as a whole the ordinary entries are about the same, but there has been a marked increase in Architecture, while numbers in Science and Engineering have risen owing to the award of State Bursaries for students in Radio-Location.

Throughout the year under review, opportunity has been taken to evacuate to the centres where it can be used or stored much of the scientific apparatus which still remained in the College. This has had two advantages : it reduces the risk of loss in the event of further damage to the buildings and it is making possible a growing resumption of research. This had practically ceased during the first year of evacuation ; it was resumed on a small scale in 1940–41, and 1941–42 shows an increase.

In this third session of evacuation, an anomalous situation has arisen in relation to the "freshmen" of 1939–40. Most of these students have reached the last stage of their undergraduate courses without having had any experience of College life in London, and, if they have been inside the Gower Street buildings at all, it has only been for preliminary interviews. The only way to remedy this deficiency at the present time is by means of verbal and pictorial description. To this end, Professor Chambers has, with characteristic public spirit, given illustrated lectures on the College to the students at Aberystwyth and Bangor. No one was better qualified to speak of the traditions and personalities of the past and of the well-loved fabric with which they were associated. At any time such lectures would have a great attraction, but the circumstances in which they were delivered gave them a special significance. They were received with the keenest appreciation both by the members of the staff in exile and by the students for whom they were primarily intended. The Provost was present on each occasion.

The students themselves have been active in promoting as far as possible the corporate life of each centre and in keeping alive College traditions. New Phineas has continued to circulate as the magazine of University College and has acted as an invaluable link between the separated faculties and departments. The editorial board are performing an act of public service for which the College as a whole is greatly indebted. Members of the academic staff attached to one or other of the centres have contributed the familiar feature of Vox Collegii. The representatives of the two Union Societies have also played a leading part in stimulating collegiate life. Aberystwyth, Bangor, and Leatherhead celebrated Foundation Week last session in true style with a Foundation Address, a Dance, and in two cases a Debate. The Foundation speakers were Miss Vera Brittain (Aberystwyth), Professor John Macmurray (Bangor), and the Dean of Canterbury (Leatherhead). The Engineers at Swansea, besides maintaining their social and athletic life, have produced a very creditable issue of their own Engineering Society's Journal. The College has reason to be proud of the part many of their number played when the town suffered heavy air raids. Both at the time of these disasters and during the aftermath of débris clearance U.C.L. students rendered valiant service. At Cambridge, the Bartlett Society has done much to co-ordinate the social and intellectual activities of the Architects, while the Law Students have had the stimulus of close contact with those of King's College and the London School of Economics. The old tripartite intercollegiate arrangement for Law teaching is once more in operation with the coming of the King's men to Cambridge. The Congress of the National Union of Students held at Cambridge in the Spring of 1941 provided our students with a welcome opportunity of foregathering with those of other Universities. The Slade School is working in congenial surroundings at the Ashmolean Museum in Oxford, and exile has in no respect diminished the enthusiasm both for work and play which is so characteristic of the Art student. The Slade Society is flourishing and the social life has suffered little, if any, eclipse.

The limited space of a war-time report will not permit of any further details of social events, nor of athletic fixtures arranged either as self-contained College events or as participation in the sports of the receiving Colleges. Enough has, however, been reported to show that the corporate spirit has not been quenched. There have even been, during the last twelve months, signs that Faculty rivalries of olden days have re-awakened despite the restrictions imposed by geographical separation. It irked the Engineers at Swansea to know that the undisputed possession of their own home at Leatherhead had enabled the Medicals to become the temporary hosts of Phineas, the College ma cot. After suffering some vicissitudes at the hands of his ardent champions involving him in a certain amount of uncomfortable travel to and fro between Leatherhead and South Wales, Phineas now rests in neutral territory.

Leatherhead has continued to exercise its opportunities for hospitality by entertaining members of the Professorial Board for short periods, during which meetings of the Board and of other committees have been held. These reunions have proved especially valuable at a time when plans for post-war restoration and developments have been under consideration, and the conditions under which the meetings have been held have made them extremely popular. During the period under review, there have been three such Leatherhead assemblies. The College Authorities are indebted to Professor Winton and all associated with him in the management of Leatherhead for the public-spirited manner in which they have thus put at the disposal of their colleagues the amenities which they themselves enjoy.

It is gratifying to record that three students of the College were among the twenty-six chosen candidates for studentships provided by the Rockefeller Foundation to enable clinical training at a University in the United States or Canada at a time when the usual facilities might not be available in this country. The selection was made from some 90–100 applicants, all British medical students.

THE ACADEMIC STAFF.

On the invitation of the Provost, the following Professors are continuing to act on his behalf as responsible heads over the evacuated sections of the College :—

Aberystwyth	Professor H. E. Butler.
Bangor	Professor G. B. Jeffery.
Swansea	Professor R. O. Kapp.

Bartlett School of Architecture	Professor A. E. Richardson.
Oxford :
Slade School of Fine Art	Professor Randolph Schwabe.

In the case of the departments where the Professors are absent on War Service, or for any other reason, members of the Assistant Staff have been appointed as acting-heads. The following are acting in that capacity during the Session 1941–42 :—

Faculty of Arts :
Italian	Mr. Roberto Weiss.
Political Economy	Dr. P. N. Rosenstein-Rodan.
Faculty of Science :
Chemistry (Bangor section) ..	Dr. O. L. Brady.
Physics	Mr. D. Orson Wood.
Geology.....	Dr. L. J. Chubb.
Faculty of Medical Sciences :
Anatomy	Dr. Una Fielding.
Physiology	Dr. W. H. Newton.
Biochemistry	Dr. L. Margaret Kerly.
Faculty of Engineering :
Mechanical Engineering	Mr. B. J. Lloyd-Evans.

Mr. Orson Wood, Senior Tutor, and Dr. L. W. Tancock, Assistant Tutor to Arts Students, at Bangor ; Miss E. Goodyear, Tutor to Women Students, Dr. J. F. Lockwood, Tutor to Arts Students, and Mr. H. Terrey, Assistant Tutor to Science Students, at Aberystwyth ; Dr. W. H. Newton, Sub-Dean, and Mr. K. C. Richardson, House Tutor, at Leatherhead ; Mr. L. Stuart Stanley, Tutor to Architecture Students at Cambridge, are all taking a valuable share in securing the smooth running of the administrative side. Mr. L. S. Elton rendered excellent service in connection with the administration of the Slade School at Oxford up to December, 1941, when he was released for War work. His work for the Slade School has been temporarily undertaken by Mr. R. Nuttall Smith.

Restricted space prohibits a full report of academic staff changes during the past twelve months, but there are certain outstanding matters which cannot be passed over.

The end of the Session 1940–41 brought the retirement under the age-limit of three members of the professoriate whose connection with the teaching work of the College, in widely differing fields, is of long standing: in the Faculty of Arts, Dr. R. W. Chambers, Quain Professor of English; in the Faculty of Laws, Mr. J. H. Morgan, K.C., Professor of Constitutional Law; and in the Faculty of Science, Dr. Abraham Wolf, Professor of Logic and Scientific Method.

Most happily for the College, the retirement of Professor Chambers has not brought with it an immediate discontinuance of active work, for he continues to serve the Department of English as Special Lecturer and retains his seat on the Professorial Board by nomination under Statute 24 (4). The Committee feel, therefore, that this is not the time for a valedictory summing-up of his manifold activities for the good of the community, to which he has given, and from which he has received, such whole-hearted devotion. His retirement from the Quain Chair was, nevertheless, an occasion which could not be allowed to pass without some expression of the feelings of his colleagues. At their meeting on 30th October, 1941, the College Committee associated themselves with a resolution adopted by the Professorial Board, from which the following is an extract :—

> On the occasion of the retirement of Professor Chambers from the Quain Professorship of English Language and Literature, the Professorial Board desires to place on record its deep appreciation of the many services rendered by Professor Chambers, alike to the College and to the University.
> Chambers's life and career have been for over half a century wholly bound up with his own College and his own University, a potent force and a source of strength to both, and a shining example of loyalty to their ideals and their interests. In the University he has played an important part, along with such colleagues as Ker, Gregory Foster, Priebsch, Gollancz, Lee, and Reed, and in intimate relations with other London scholars, bibliographers and palæographers, Pollard, Greg, McKerrow, and Flower, in building up a great London tradition of English scholarship and a great University School of English.
> In the College, among many services he has rendered, none exceeds the development of the College Library under his devoted and expert care as Librarian of the College for twenty-two years before he became Quain Professor in 1922.

The Department of English under his headship grew to full stature and bears the indelible mark of a great teacher and a great scholar.

But indeed the signs of his love and energy will be long manifest at every turn in the manifold life of the College, of which he has been a Fellow for over forty years.

As a scholar, his outstanding contributions to learning have made him an authority wherever English is studied and have earned for him recognition and honour second to none in the annals of English scholarship. He has been a Fellow of the British Academy since 1927.

Fortunately for the College, retirement does not at this stage, imply a full farewell. Professor Chambers has, owing to the circumstances of the war, with characteristic unselfishness agreed to continue to help the English Department so long as his services may be needed there, by acting as Special Lecturer. We regret that this work and the general circumstances of the war will prevent him from devoting himself, in the way he would have wished, to scholarly labours, but we are happy to think that at least one further generation of students will know what the Chambers tradition means for the College.

Professor J. H. Morgan was first concerned with the teaching of Constitutional Law in 1908, as Acting-Professor, and was appointed to the part-time chair in 1915. His courses on Colonial Constitutional Law, on which he has long been recognised as an authority, and his public lectures on constitutional problems affecting the Empire, delivered during several sessions under the Rhodes Trust, were noted features of his work at the College.

Professor Wolf's career at the College began as a student. His first teaching appointment, as Assistant in the Department of Philosophy under Professor James Sully, dates back to 1898. His powers as scholar and teacher marked him out for early promotion, and he became Assistant Professor in 1906. In 1911, the Senate conferred on him the title of Reader in Logic and Ethics. In 1921 he was appointed Professor of Logic and Scientific Method, jointly at University College and the London School of Economics, and in that capacity became head of the new Department of the History and Method of Science at the College. His share in the building up of that Department, designed primarily for students working for the Master of Science Degree in the History and Philosophy of Science, is a lasting contribution to the work of his Faculty.

The University has conferred the title of Professor Emeritus on these three Professors on the occasion of their retirement.

Professor C. J. Sisson, the Lord Northcliffe Professor of Modern English Literature, has succeeded Professor Chambers as head of the Department of English.

Dr. J. H. Gray, Senior Demonstrator in the Department of Anatomy and Embryology, resigned at the end of April, 1941, on his appointment to the Chair of Anatomy at St. Mary's Hospital Medical School. A reference to his untimely death soon after taking up that appointment is made elsewhere (page 30).

Title of Reader.—The Senate have conferred the title of Reader on the following members of the academic staff :—Dr. R. E. Dickinson (Geography), Dr. R. J. W. Le Fevre (Chemistry), Dr. J. F. Lockwood (Classics), and Mr. G. Tillotson (English).

On December 31st, 1941, 84* members of the Academic Staff were absent on National or other service ; 107 members were continuing their academic duties for the College at the various centres.

GENERAL FINANCE.

Financial Year 1940–41.

The Accounts for the year ended 31st July, 1941, are appended to this Report (Appendix I.).

College Establishment Income and Expenditure Account.

Income.—The ordinary income decreased by £20,884 12*s.* 11*d.*, from £192,478 17*s.* 5*d.* to £171,594 4*s.* 6*d.* The main causes were a decrease of £6,478 in fees due to a decrease in the number of students and a decrease of £4,525 in the University Court Grant. The amount appropriated for general purposes under the Emergency Statute has been shown under Extraordinary Income for 1940–41, whereas in 1939–40 it was included under Ordinary Income (£7,418).

Expenditure. — The ordinary expenditure decreased by £20,353 7*s.* 7*d.* from £175,513 6*s.* 3*d.* to £155,159 18*s.* 8*d.* There have been further savings due to the release of members of the academic, administrative, and servant staffs for National Service and reductions under the head of Maintenance of Premises.

The excess of ordinary income over ordinary expenditure was thus £16,434 5*s.* 10*d.*, which was insufficient to meet the heavy cost of evacuation and re-evacuation, accommodation in other Colleges and War Damage Insurance, in addition to other extraordinary expenditure. After the appropriation of the available surplus income of Trust Funds under the Emergency Statute, however, it was found possible to meet the deficit which would otherwise have occurred and to place the sum of £11,750 and £807 14*s.* 1*d.* to General and Library Reserve Funds respectively.

The final surplus in respect of 1940–41 was £24 5*s.* 8*d.*

* This figure excludes honorary members and those part-time members to whom no payment was made owing to their special courses not being held.

BENEFACTIONS.

(i.) Gifts to the Library.

Since the heavy loss to the Library, by enemy action, of books to the number of some 70,000 (to which a fuller reference was made in the Report of 1941), many friends of the College have shown their practical sympathy by gifts, some of them of great value. The warm thanks of the Committee have been accorded to the donors. The following is a list of the outstanding library gifts received since September 1940 :—

Lady Amos and Mrs. Elgood.

Some 470 volumes, chiefly of historical interest, presented in memory of three generations of the family of Amos, who were Professors of Law at University College, London.

The late Professor Emeritus G. Dawes Hicks, by bequest.

3,254 volumes and 395 pamphlets (Philosophy).

675 volumes and 13 pamphlets (Science, English literature, and Classics).

Professor T. G. Hill.

ADMINISTRATION.

The arrangements for administration have undergone little change since the issue of the last Report. The official headquarters are still at Stanstead Bury, Stanstead Abbotts, near Ware, Herts, where the Provost, Secretary, Registrar, and several members of the general administrative staff are in residence. The Librarian and some of his staff are also at work there. The Provost has visited the evacuation centres from time to time, and he and the Secretary pay frequent visits to Gower Street, where the Superintendent of Buildings, with his staff, and the Assistant Secretary are in daily attendance.

Reference is made on page 21 to members of the academic staff who are performing administrative duties at the teaching centres. In some of these, members of the administrative staff are also working. Special mention should be made of the notable service performed by Miss Winifred Radley, Deputy Registrar, at Bangor, and by Miss E. Valerie Heubach, Confidential Clerk, at Aberystwyth, on both of whom many extra burdens have been laid.

In another section of this Report (page 32) the grievous loss suffered by the death of Miss Anne Kay Robertson, Publications Secretary, is recorded.

THE COLLEGE BUILDINGS AND THE WAR.

The Annual Report of 1941 recorded a series of disasters sustained by the College buildings through enemy action, involving the complete destruction of the Great Hall, the Carey Foster Laboratory of Physics, the Library territory on the first floor north of the Dome, and the Gustave Tuck and Applied Mathematics Theatres, as well as widespread partial damage. An estimated destruction of books and pamphlets amounting to some 100,000 was also reported.

The steps taken to meet the situation thus created have already been dealt with in a previous Report. The College Committee felt the urgent need, not only of coping with the immediate difficulties which had arisen, but also of planning ways and means for the rehabilitation of the buildings with a view to re-establishing College life in its full sense whenever the opportunity came. It was agreed that the desire to return to London should not in any way commit the College to a hasty reconstruction of damaged premises, but that all possible care should be given to the preparation of a scheme to be ready for use when the time for action arrived. Much careful discussion took place at meetings of the Professorial Board and College Committee, but before any definite programme could be adopted, a further series of disasters occurred.

On the night of April 16th, 1941, there was another heavy attack on the buildings, in the course of which the departmental libraries

(happily empty of books) south of the Dome, the Exhibition Room, the General Office, the Provost's and Secretary's rooms, the Council Room, the Botanical Theatre, the Department of Mathematics above it, and the Records Office were all burned out, either partially or completely. There was also an isolated fire in one of the sculpture studios of the Slade School. The widespread damage at the south end was largely due to the long time which elapsed before fire engines could come to the rescue. The College's own fire squad did invaluable service in arresting the progress of the conflagration down the South Wing, but they were unable to cope with a fire-bomb which had lodged on the roof of the Mathematics building.

Yet another enemy attack was made on the night of May 10th–11th, in which the older portion of the Ramsay Laboratory of Chemical Engineering and the Applied Mathematics Laboratories were destroyed by a high explosive bomb and the east end of the Chemistry building damaged.

Faced with all this further destruction, the Committee have had to approach the problem of rehabilitation from a new angle. During recent months, much careful consideration has been given to the matter in the light of reports on discussions by the Professorial Board. Generally speaking, the problem has been viewed as a whole, but it has, as a practicable scheme, been sub-divided under the following three heads: (i.) the immediate steps to be taken on the cessation of hostilities, with a view to resuming work in London, (ii.) the restoration of the damaged buildings, and (iii.) long-distance planning for the ultimate development of buildings and site. A committee, consisting of members of the College Committee and Professorial Board, has been appointed to consider and report on the steps to be taken in regard to (iii.). This Committee is now at work.

A tribute was paid in the last Report to the loyal service of those members of the Works Staff who remain on duty under the Superintendent of Buildings, safeguarding the injured fabric from greater deterioration as far as practicable, continuing the work of salvage, and sharing the night fire-watching. Their work is carried on in difficult conditions and they are frequently called upon to perform awkward tasks. This also applies to the small band of women cleaners under the College Housekeeper. The College Committee desire once more to record their recognition of the difficulties and their appreciation of the cheerful way in which they are met.

OBITUARY.

Dr. Alfred Joseph Clark.

News of the death on 30th July, 1941, of Dr. Alfred Joseph Clark was received with deepest regret by his former colleagues and other friends at the College. After taking his medical course at Cambridge, he joined the College staff in 1912 as Assistant in Pharmacology, but left after a brief period of service to become Professor at the University of Cape Town. In 1919 he returned to the College as successor to Professor Cushny in the Chair of Pharmacology, which he occupied until 1926. In that year he migrated to Edinburgh, once more as successor to Professor Cushny, whose death had left a vacancy in the Chair of Materia Medica at that ancient University. It was here that Dr. Clark found his journey's end, for he continued at Edinburgh up to the time of his death, which came to him at the comparatively early age of fifty-five. During his earlier career in London, he had been connected with Guy's Hospital as Lecturer and House Physician. He was a Fellow of the Royal Society, of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and of the Royal College of Physicians.

Captain Arthur Dunford.

News has recently been received that Captain A. Dunford, Royal Marines, died on 8th August, 1941, a prisoner-of-war. For some months prior to that he had been reported missing from the Crete Expedition.

His connection with the College was a very brief one, for he was only appointed Assistant Lecturer in Electrical Engineering in January 1939, and left for military service on the outbreak of hostilities, but he had had time enough to prove himself a good colleague. The College Committee deeply regret that a career of promise should have been brought to such an untimely and tragic end.

Professor Emeritus Percy Flemming.

Professor Emeritus Percy Flemming, whose death occurred on 19th December, 1941, had a fourfold connection with the College, that of pupil of the School when it was at Gower Street, student of the College, teacher, and Fellow. He took a brilliant medical course, gaining the University Scholarship in Medicine in 1887, honours in Midwifery, Surgery, Materia Medica, and Anatomy, and the Gold Medal in Medicine at the M.D. Examination in 1888. After his election as Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England in 1889, he began to specialise in what was to become his real life-work, the treatment of diseases of the eye. This first brought him into touch with the Royal London Ophthalmic Hospital, Moorfields, an institution with which he was actively connected until 1919. One of his outstanding pieces of service there was the foundation of a training school for nurses engaged in ophthalmic practice. He was also a surgeon to the New Hospital for Women.

His long and distinguished connection with the staff of University College Hospital began in 1897 with his appointment as assistant ophthalmic surgeon. In 1903 he became ophthalmic surgeon and rendered active service in that capacity for twenty years. From 1923 till the time of his death, he remained on the consulting staff.

He was appointed to the Chair of Ophthalmic Medicine and Surgery at the College in 1903. Owing to the operation of the University College, London (Transfer), Act of 1905, his membership of the professoriate was of brief duration, for he went over with the other medical teachers to University College Hospital Medical School in 1907. The ties that bound him to his College were, however, by no means weakened by that transference. He had been elected Fellow in 1892 and his presence at College occasions was always welcome. The title of Professor Emeritus was conferred on him by the Senate in 1927.

As has been the case with so many eminent members of the medical profession, Percy Flemming's interests were not bounded by the confines of that profession. He found time for a considerable amount of archæological research, more especially connected with London, much of which was done in association with the London Museum at Lancaster House. A paper written by him on the work of monastic infirmaries, with special reference to that at Westminster, was of particular interest, and the lantern lectures which he was occasionally induced to deliver on some of his more popular discoveries were greatly appreciated. He was elected a Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries in 1931.

Dr. James Hugo Gray.

The death, on 20th December, 1941, of Dr. J. H. Gray has brought to an untimely close a useful career in the field of Medical Science with a future full of promise. Though only thirty-two years of age, he had already shown himself to be a strong teacher, with powers of leadership, and well fitted to carry responsibility. He joined the staff of the Department of Anatomy and Embryology in 1936 as a Demonstrator and gained speedy promotion to the rank of Senior Demonstrator. He proved a source of strength to the Department in the difficult days which followed the tragically sudden death of Professor Woollard at the beginning of 1939 and during the early days of the evacuation of his Faculty, first to Cardiff and later to its present temporary home at Leatherhead. When he resigned his appointment at the end of April, 1941, to take up the duties of Professor of Anatomy at St. Mary's Hospital Medical School, the regret felt at his departure from the College was tempered by the knowledge that his brilliant qualities would not only be retained within the University, but would have a fuller opportunity of development in his more responsible office. The sympathies of the College go out to the Medical School of St. Mary's Hospital in the sad loss of one who had had such a brief opportunity of service and from whom great things might have been expected.

Dr. Edith Mary Guest.

Miss Edith Mary Guest, M.A., M.D., who died on January 16th, 1942, was well known to a large circle of friends as an exceptionally gifted woman of the most varied interests—an English scholar, a medical practitioner, and latterly an enthusiastic Egyptologist and worker on Irish antiquities. She was a graduate of the English Honours School of Oxford, and took her London M.D. from the Royal Free Hospital. From 1914 to 1918 she was one of the medical officers in military hospitals in Malta and in Egypt. After the War she was Medical Inspector of Schools in London.

About twenty years ago, Dr. Guest began to study Egyptology under Sir Flinders Petrie at the College, and was Honorary Assistant in the Department of Egyptology from 1924 to 1933. She was a courageous and adventurous traveller. About 1924, she joined Dr. Margaret Murray and Miss Gertrude Caton Thompson in excavations in Malta, and in 1932 assisted Dr. Murray in excavations in Minorca. She also helped in excavations on the Rio Tinto in Spain. For many years Dr. Guest was greatly handicapped by frail health, and her literary output was therefore small. It was, however, marked by originality of thought, accuracy of detail, and felicity of expression. It is for her character that Dr. Guest's friends will chiefly remember her—for her serenity, her happiness, her sympathy, her sane, shrewd judgment, her kindly humour, above all for her courage and her utter refusal to be daunted by ill-health or other circumstances.

Mr. Jakob H. Helweg.

The Department of Scandinavian Studies has suffered a heavy loss by the death of the Queen Alexandra Lecturer in Danish, Mr. J. H. Helweg, which occurred on 6th June, 1941. He had been connected with the department almost from its inception, having been appointed the first lecturer in Danish in 1918. His period of service with the College had thus extended over twenty-three years.

The early days of many new University departments are periods of especially hard work on the part of the teachers and of meagre, often disappointing, results. The case of the Scandinavian Department was no exception to this. The limited demand for University Courses in the three languages and their literatures had to be stimulated and encouraged. Mr. Helweg, from the outset of his appointment, addressed himself to the task of creating a wider interest in his subject and spared no pains in the effort. His public lectures, which covered Danish cultural life from many aspects and through several centuries, entailed much preparation on the part of the lecturer, but this was given ungrudgingly. Gradually the hard work was rewarded by an increasing response, and Mr. Helweg had the satisfaction of seeing his subject, in common with those of his fellow lecturers, firmly established in the University Degree curricula. His work for the Anglo-Danish Students' Bureau also did much to aid the department, and he contributed in no small measure to the successful working of the arrangement with the University of Cambridge for Scandinavian teaching, in which the University College lecturers participated as visiting teachers. At the time of his death, he was actually the only member of the College department still at work during the War under that scheme.

Although Mr. Helweg never took a prominent part in the social life of the College, he served it loyally, and his pleasant, simple manner attracted many friends among his colleagues. It is a matter of regret to them that his last years should have been clouded by his own ill-health and by the invasion of his country by Germany. Added to these anxieties, the temporary closing of the Department of Scandinavian Studies, consequent on the evacuation of the College, must have seemed to him a serious setback to the work of building up which he had already achieved. He accepted all these hardships with quiet dignity and without complaint.

Miss Anne Kay Robertson.

The passing of Miss Anne Kay Robertson, who, with other members of her family, was killed by enemy action on April 17th, 1941, brought great personal sorrow to her large circle of friends at the College.

She joined the administrative staff in 1919 and was soon appointed Publications Secretary, for which office she possessed such obvious qualifications. No one had a greater pride in the College than she, and she took infinite pains to secure that the work of her office should be worthy of such an institution. Setting a high standard for herself, she also succeeded in bringing out the very best in the young clerks who worked with her. Her gifts of apparently inexhaustible patience, wide sympathies, a well-balanced judgment, and practical common-sense led her colleagues to go frequently to her for help and advice, and she never failed them. Her work brought her into touch with the teachers of all Faculties, who found in her something much more than mere efficiency. Her personality, gentle but strong, her unfailing courtesy, and her well-stored mind brought her many friends, and she was greatly valued by all who knew her. One of her more important duties was that of carrying out the arrangements for Public Lectures, and the quiet charm of her manner when meeting the lecturers beforehand, dispensing the hospitality of the tea-room and attending to the comfort of members of the audience will long be associated with the College in the minds of its visitors on those occasions. Her loss will be keenly felt when the College re-assembles once more and her place will indeed be hard to fill.

Beadle Frank Salkilld.

In the morning black-out of 14th November, 1941, when on his way to work, Beadle Frank Salkilld was knocked down while crossing a road and received fatal injuries. Thus passed an old friend whose connection with the College had been one of long and faithful service. He joined the staff in 1890 and was first employed in the carpenters' shop, where he worked with another outstanding College personality, the elder Williams. Later, he became a porter, and eventually succeeded Henderson as Science Beadle. In that capacity, in addition to his work for the Faculty of Science, he had under his care the rooms of the Union Society and the Professors' Smoking Room, duties which would in any case have brought him into close contact with staff and students, and to which his own personality added a special intimacy. His knowledge of the College personnel was exceptional. The College meant everything to him and he gave of his very best. Such devotion brought its own reward and "Frank" was among the best-loved figures of the community. Inflexible to the point of severity, when upholding rules and regulations, which were sacred to him, his native kindliness and readiness to oblige made him a friendly tyrant, and many were the uncovenanted mercies he performed.

To quote from an appreciation in the College Magazine, "he was a stickler for the old customs," often resenting the changes which time inevitably brought. To such a type of mind the havoc wrought by the disasters of the present War had a peculiar poignancy, though he contrived to remain cheerful to the end. He was due to retire at the end of 1939–40, and was actually released from his duties during that session, when the buildings were first evacuated. It was a great joy to him to be recalled in 1940–41 for special wartime work, and, though circumstances denied him the privilege of re-assuming his beadle's uniform, he undertook the new tasks assigned to him with the cheerful readiness to serve that had always characterised him.

The College Committee received a report of his fifty years of service at a meeting held in 1940 and signalised the occasion by a special message and gift. They regret that his proud record should have ended so tragically, but feel that it would have been his wish to die in harness. He leaves behind him a memory deeply rooted in honour and affection.

Professor Emeritus Herbert Ritchie Spencer.

Professor Emeritus Herbert Ritchie Spencer, who died on 28th August, 1941, after a long life of service to humanity, had a connection with the College which extended over a period of more than sixty years, for his student days dated from 1879 to 1886. In 1892 he returned as Professor of Midwifery and continued to hold that appointment until 1907, when his department was transferred under the University College, London (Transfer) Act of 1905 to University College Hospital Medical School. With him went a group of other brilliant medical men, who, after bringing fame to their College, served the new Medical School with a distinction which early secured for it the high reputation which it enjoys in the medical world to-day. The College naturally took a special pride in the later careers of these men and the ties that bound them to her were very close.

The great work achieved by Herbert Spencer as Obstetric Assistant, later Obstetric Physician, at University College Hospital during the period 1887 to 1925, when he was associated with Sir John Williams, and subsequently as Consulting Physician, and his fame as one of the leading gynæcologists of his time, brought him recognition from learned societies at home and abroad. He was at one time President of the Obstetrical and Gynæcological Section of the Royal Society of Medicine and of the Medical Society of London, and made many contributions to medical literature. His profession did not, however, by any means absorb all his interests, which included books, birds, sport, and travel.

The Senate conferred the title of Professor Emeritus of Obstetric Medicine upon him in 1926. He was a Life-Governor of the former College Corporation.

Mr. Gustave Tuck.

Mr. Gustave Tuck, whose death occurred on 9th January, 1942, was a good friend to the College. He had for many years served as a representative of the Jewish Historical Society on the Mocatta Library Committee and had been instrumental in raising the first endowment fund for that Library, which was presented by the Society to the College in 1906. Since then, the original Mocatta Collection of books on Jewish, particularly Anglo-Jewish, History and Antiquities, had been added to by the acquisition of many other valuable Collections of the same nature, and the need of more adequate accommodation for this section of the College Library became pressing. No one was more keenly alive to this need than Mr. Gustave Tuck, and no one worked harder than he to secure the means of meeting it. By his own private generosity, and as a memorial to his wife, the late Mrs. Esther Tuck, the former Anatomy Theatre, with the territory surrounding it, was transformed by Professor Richardson, and equipped as a Mocatta Library and Museum, with a lecture theatre. In recognition of the handsome gift, the College Committee named the theatre after the donor. On the occasion of the opening ceremony, on 13th December, 1932, Mr. Tuck, who was then President of the Jewish Historical Society, handed to the Chairman of the College Committee, the late Sir John Rose Bradford, a cheque for £3,500, representing donations collected by him from members of his Society and other friends. Nor did Mr. Tuck's active interest and generosity cease there. The Mocatta Museum Collection has since been augmented from time to time by his gifts, which have happily been saved from the disaster by enemy action which has befallen the unique memorial which housed them.

The Committee are conscious of the debt which the College owes to the zeal and energy of such a benefactor, and it is a matter of great regret to them that, while his last days were clouded by the havoc wrought in a place so dear to him, he did not live to see the restoration of the Mocatta Library and Museum.

The College Committee also record with regret the death of the following persons who were connected with the College or with some aspect of its work :—
